

Parenting Outside of the Box Children at Laura's Library
Wednesday, September 6th 10:30am - 12:00pm

This month's topic:

Keeping Our Eyes on the Prize: Holding on to the really important stuff through the transition back to school

School is back in session, and that means that there are many expectations placed on our children as well as our family. While these expectations are important and have value, it is easy to get overwhelmed and lose sight of the big picture for the health and wellbeing of our families. Jeffrey Swan will discuss finding a healthy balance and making sure we keep a healthy perspective.

Jeffrey Swan is a Licensed Professional Counselor that has worked in and around schools for most of the last 15 years. He has worked within the Eanes school district and now has a private practice working more directly with children and parents in a one on one setting.

In addition, Caroline Nelson, Transition Specialist and family liaison for Eanes ISD Special Education will help guide us through numerous resources available to help identify opportunities both within the district and in the Westlake area.

About the Series:

Whether your child is diagnosed with special needs, or their particular challenges have yet to be identified, or if they are spirited, struggle with reading or writing, have sensory issues, have learning, emotional or behavioral differences, or fall into the quirky kid category, we'll explore the means to help you help your child here in the Westlake area with monthly guest speakers and parent discussions. This series is targeted toward parents of children throughout Eanes ISD whether in public, private, or home schooling and is open to everyone.
